

THREE HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

W. Trishler of Phoenix was seriously injured and two unidentified companions hurt when a stripped Ford roadster left the Mesa-Tempe highway at the Pacific Creamery at 11:30 o'clock last night. Trishler was presumably the driver.

The machine was headed toward Phoenix and is believed to have been traveling at a fast rate of speed when the accident occurred. In leaving the road, the car turned completely over, finally coming to a halt right side up several yards to the side of the road, just after crossing a small bridge over a canal.

A passing autoist, seeing the machine hurtling through the air, was immediately at the side of the wrecked car. He found Trishler partly under the car, unconscious. One of the other occupants of had been hurled a few feet to the side of the machine. Although seemingly conscious, he was groaning loudly and apparently in great pain. The third was badly shaken but walking around.

The autoist directed his attention to the unconscious man and hurried him to the home of Dr. R. L. Alexander at Tempe, where first aid treatment was administered and a hurried examination made. Failing to recover his normal condition, he was later rushed to the Sisters hospital here, where he regained consciousness at an early hour this morning. The extent of his injuries had not been determined.

Trishler is married, according to personal effects found on his person, his wife residing at 2324 Tuleasa street, El Paso. He is a member of the American Legion.

"LOOK OLDER THAN LONDON"
Looking back on it all, I realize that America never struck me as a new country, although its inhabitants often seemed to be a new people. The cities are more mature than the citizens. New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington—all have an air of permanence and age. The buildings, even when most fantastic, suggest indigence and age. The streets, too, would the presence of more ancient structures increase this effect.

To the eye of the ordinary Englishman, accustomed to work in what we call the city, in Fleet street, in the Strand, in Piccadilly or in Oxford street, New York would not appear to be a younger place than London, and Boston might easily strike him as older. Nor is London more than a little older, except in spot, such as the Tower and the Temple and the Abbey and that little Tudor row in Holborn, all separated by vast tracts of modernity. Indeed, I would almost go further and say that London sets up an illusion of being never even than New York, by reason of its more disturbing street traffic both in the roads and on the footways, and the prevalence of the gaily colored omnibus which thunders along so many thoroughfares, in notable contrast with the sedate and sober vehicles that serve Fifth avenue and are hardly seen elsewhere.—E. V. Lucas in the Outlook.

COMMERCIAL CANDOR
"No," said the old man, sternly. "I will not do it. Never have I sold anything by false representation and I will not begin now." For a moment he was silent, and the clerk who stood before him could see that the better nature of his employer was fighting strongly for the right. "No," said the old man again; "I will not do it." It is an inferior grade of shoe and I will never pass it off as anything better. Mark it 'A Shoe Fit for a Queen,' and put it in the window. A queen does not have to do much walking."—Japan Advertiser.

THE CANNY SCOT
After a salesman had sold a big order of goods to the Scotch buyer for a store, he sought to make the Scot a present of a box of cigars.
"But sorry I cannot accept," the Scot said, "but there's a rule of the house that ye cannot take presents from salesmen."
"Well," laughed the salesman, "I'll sell them to you for 5 cents, then."
"That's different now," the canny buyer replied, after taking a good sniff at the box. "I can buy my smokes anywhere I please. I'll take four boxes."—Minneapolis Journal.
